A historical novel based on a true story. The 1935 Cover-up is exposed for the very first time through the unforgettable life and unmerciful torture of Jessica Lauren Fields. She overheard the plot to assassinate U.S. Senator and former Louisiana Governor Huey P. Long (The Kingfish). She reported the conspiracy to the authorities before the assassination. Two days after the assassination, she was arrested and charged with slander and spreading malicious lies. The next day the cover-up was upheld in a kangaroo court which judged her incompetent and committed her to a mental institution for life in Washington. She was not permitted visitors and was ineligible for parole. She remained confined until she died fifty-three years after the assassination. Jessica discovered that telling the truth against the powers that be required paying tremendous consequences. A life sentence without visitors or the possibility of parole, for telling the truth, is unjust and unmerciful torture in the United States of America.
