Tomorrow's Change Makers: Reclaiming the Power of Citizenship for a New Generation Marilyn Price-Mitchell Ph.D.

For everyone who cares about the future of democracy and the wellbeing of generations to come, Dr. Marilyn Price-Mitchell shows how families, schools, and communities play critical roles in raising and mentoring tomorrow's citizens. Through powerful voices of passion-filled American youth, you learn about the relationships, experiences, and challenges that shaped their young lives of service, civic engagement, and commitment to causes bigger than themselves.

Tomorrow's Change Makers links the latest research on civic engagement with positive youth development, and provides practical, research-based advice on how to:

- Help young people transform volunteering, service learning, and civic engagement experiences beyond a requirement for college resumes to value-defining opportunities for personal growth and citizenship development.
- Utilize effective mentoring, coaching, and parenting practices that help young people believe in themselves and their abilities to improve the world.
- Cultivate eight core abilities that support youth development and engaged citizenship, helping children chart meaningful pathways through life and fulfilling roles in democracy and civil society.
- Encourage challenging and meaningful volunteering and service learning opportunities for every child, based on their unique strengths and interests.
