Not illustrated. 1839 Excerpt: ...actions that they are happy--they sing, laugh, dance, and make merry. He is a shallow smatterer in human nature, who does not understand this, that mirth is often rather the effort of the mind to throw off trouble, than the evidence of happiness. It shows that a man wishes to be happy, and is trying for it, and is oftencr the means used to get it than the proof that it exists. And as to singing--why do prisoners sing in jails t We have all heard them. Does it prove solitary cells a paradise 1 Do jail walls, dingy light and solitude make men so happy that they sing for joy? They sing to make pleasure for themselves, not to give vent to it. Their singing indicates a mind seeking amusement rather than one content with what it has--a. mind conscious of a want, and striving to satisfy it, rather than one rejoicing in n full supply. In illustration of this we insert a fact stated by the Rev. Dr. Channing of Boston in his late work on slavery, first edition, p. 161. "I once passed a colored woman at work on a plantation, who was singing apparently with animation, and whose general manners would have led me to set her down as the happiest of the gang3 f said to her, ' Your work seems pleasant to you? She replied, 'No, Massa.' Supposing that she referred to something particularly disagreeable in her immediate occupation, I said to her, Tell me then what part of your work is most pleasant.' She answered with much emphasis, No part pleasant. We Forced to do it.'" The celebrated Dr. Rush of Philadelphia, in one of his published medical papers, entitled " An account of the diseases peculiar to the negroes in the West Indies, and which are produced by their slavery," says: "We are told by their masters that they are the happiest people in the wor...
